

The French International Development and Research Centre (CIDR), in collaboration with CERMES (a research group of the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique) and the French National Federation of Mutuality (FNMF) present a training course on ‘Participative Management of Micro Insurance: Models, Advantages and Limits’.

This training course is part of a cycle of seminars about the role of the social economy in distributing and financing health care in Africa.

It is made up of three modules:

- o Module 1: The role of participative health microinsurance (PHMI) in financing health and welfare: 17-19th, November 2008; 20 participants, maximum.
- o Module 2: Managing and running participative health microinsurance (PHMI): November 20-22nd, 2008; 15 participants, maximum
- o Module 3: Viability of participative micro health insurance programs: tools and methods: November 24-29th, 2008; 15 participants, maximum.

It is designed for actors from both the developing world and the developed world:

- o Professionals from health ministries or other ministries working on social protection (in the health field);
- o Healthcare providers;
- o Stakeholders and promoters of micro health insurance systems;
- o Consultants and experts;
- o Officials from cooperation organisations.

The deadline for applications is the 15th October 2008. The registration form can be accessed via the CIDR website.

www.cidr.org

They can also be obtained by asking the Secrétariat de la Formation for a copy:

Cyrille Pfister: cyrille.pfister@cidr.org

Tel : 00 33 3 44 42 71 40 ; Poste 343.

Deadline: October 15th, 2008